FINAL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Argentina is a great Nation that needs to be built with our joint efforts: from our daily responsibilities, from our well done professional jobs, from the contribution of our virtues and those of the people around us, from community service and from silence. But without forgetting that we must also grow by correcting those who choose a path that destroys the common wealth of our Nation. Manuel Pereyra Terra, March 2015.

What a better way to retrieve this path than to travel back to 1819, and remember the history that forged us. To do so we must go inside a small room of a very poor house. After having walked through the door, a dull yellowish light receives us, and a great man, who did a lot for the country invites us to sit at his table. He is poor and lonely, he sacrificed all his resources in the contribution of the ideals of the founders of a Nation. And now, near his final farewell, in this humble house and under dim light he writes about his concerns for the future. We certainly talk about Francisco P. Moreno; who knowing he would die, wrote:

“I cannot sleep thinking about what to needs to be made for the greatness and defense of the country and my lack of strength, resources and life to make this understandable at this Capital city, which is so foreign for the natives! How many things I see through my memories! How hard it is to know that life shortens so fast! But, isn't it harder to live without serving? How much I would like to do, but how, how? I'm sixty-six and haven't got a dime! How much do pennies value in these cases?

I have given a thousand and eight hundred leagues to my Country and to the National Park, where the men of tomorrow, will be able to rest and acquire new strength to serve. I am not leaving my children a meter of land to bury my ashes! I obtained eighteen hundred leagues that we fought and that no one at that time knew how to defend but me, and put them under Argentina's sovereignty. I do not have a place to put away my own ashes: a small 20 centimeter sided box. Ashes that if they can occupy such a little space, perhaps scattered, would cover all I got for my country, in a faint visible to grateful eyes"... (Francisco P. Moreno, The Common Education Monitor, 1919, National Council Education Organ).-
